Introduction

Frequently in communication, we need to express our moods, our emotional state, towards the meaning expressed by the main verb in our sentences. These moods can be a possibility, an intention, an ability, a necessity etc. For this purpose, we use verbs of mood, called Modal Verbs. A modal verb is a kind of auxiliary that is used before another verb, and which expresses certain hypothetical conditions like an advice, a necessity and a request. In the case of our presentation, we will dwell on the modal auxiliaries : Should/Shouldn't, Can/Can't, Have to/Don't have to.

I- Should/Shouldn't - \ʃʊd\ / \ʃʊd.nt\

➤ Rule :

Positive form

Negative form

Question form

Subject+should+verb-inf+.... | Subject+shouldn't+verb-inf+.... | Should/n't+subject+verb-inf+...?

➤ Use : We use Should/Shouldn't, to say that something is/isn't a good idea or the right thing to do.

Eg : - You should buy an umbrella.

- You shouldn't go out so late.

➤ Remark : In general, we use Should/Shouldn't to give advices.

Eg : Shouldn't you go to school?

11- Can/Can't - \kæn\ / \kænt\

➤ Rule :

Positive form

Negative form

Question form

Subject+can+verb-inf+.... | Subject+can't+verb-inf+.... | Can/Can't+subject+verb-inf+...?

➤ Use : We use Can/Can't to talk about different kinds of possibility such as :

- An ability : Armstrong can speak English well, but he can't speak French.
- A permission : Can I go out now ?
- A probability : The person you saw yesterday can't be Ashley ; she is abroad.

III- Have to/Don't have to - \hæv.tu:\ / \daʊnt hæv.tu\

➤ Rule :

Positive form

Negative form

Subject+have/has to+verb-inf+.... | Subject+don't/doesn't have to+verb-inf+....

Question form

Do/Does+subject+have to+verb-ing+...?

➤ Use : We use Have to/Don't have to, to express necessity/unnecessity.

Eg : - Tom has to study if he wants to pass.

- I don't have to wear glasses.

➤ Remark : Have to is a bit similar to Should. However Should isn't as strong as Have to.

Eg : We have to go now, or we'll be late. (=it is necessary to go)

We should go now, or we'll be tired tomorrow. (=this a good idea)

Conclusion

To sum up, Should/Shouldn't, Can/Can't and Have to/Don't have to, are verbs of moods that express respectively a good/bad idea, a possibility/impossibility and a necessity/unnecessity. We hope that the pronunciation and the use of those concepts have been lightened as smoothly as possible in your minds.

To deepen, you should try giving your own examples using those auxiliaries according to their meanings ; and even consult the bibliography.
